‘Online date tried to rape me minutes after we met’

Court told how woman was pushed against a tree after agreeing to walk in park

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A MOTHER told a court how a man she met online tried to rape her within minutes of their first date in Harlow Town Park.

Miles Conlon, 37, of Cruden Road, Gravesend, Kent, is charged with attempted rape and assault by penetration on July 27, 2014.

His trial began on Tuesday, at Chelmsford Crown Court when the 50-year-old complainant, who cannot be named for legal reasons, answered questions.

Kate Davey, prosecuting, said:

“They had a cyber-conversation. She expressed some reservations about their age gap but they agreed to meet up.

“They met at the Esso garage in Tillwicks Road, Harlow.

“They had a conversation and decided to go for a walk in the park.

Early

“At a very early stage, she did not like the way Mr Conlon was coming across.

“She quickly came to the conclusion she did not want to meet him in the future.

“She indicated this and at this point Mr Conlon became angry.”

The court heard the pair started communicating on dating website Plenty of Fish. The complainant said their first conversation had been only the day before their first meeting.

In her testimony to Essex Police from 2014, which was played before the jury, the mum said: “He pulled me into a bush and pushed me up against this tree and I was trying to pull away.

“I said ‘I do not want anything like that. I have decided I do not want to see you again’.”

The complainant said Conlon then sexually assaulted her in a secluded area of the park where passers-by may not obviously have seen them.

She said the man had attempted to rape but she ran off and added that Conlon had driven up alongside her and offered a lift home, which she refused.

When the complainant arrived home, she said she almost immediately took a bath while her son called the police.

Conlon, who was said to have given his name as Mark, had previously pleaded not guilty to both indictments. He wore a grey suit and did not speak during the first day of the trial.

John Cardle, representing Conlon, told the court his client claimed the alleged victim was angry that he had forgotten her name and said: “Don’t worry, you will remember my name,” before storming off from the park.

Exchange

The barrister also suggested the pair had engaged in a “sexual exchange” inside Conlon’s car before they walked around the park.

The complainant’s neighbour had a text exchange with her friend and spoke to her shortly after she arrived home. She told the court: “She was looking for a relationship.

“She used a dating site and had met a number of men. She always told me before for safety reasons.

“She texted to say she was walking back and that it had gone totally wrong. She was very upset when she got home and said she had the smell of him all over her.

“She was upset and distressed.”

Anthony Calvert leaving Chelmsford Crown Court

Man admits sex assault on mother at 11th hour

Defendant avoids prison for touching young mum's bottom

By William Mata

william.mata@hertssexnews.co.uk

A 64-YEAR-OLD man was spared jail after admitting he touched the bottom of a young mum in Harlow town centre.

Anthony Calvert, of Cundalls Road, Ware, was sentenced in Chelmsford Crown Court on Monday, June 12, after a guilty plea to the sexual assault charge the judge described as coming "at the 11th hour and 59 seconds".

The incident happened in Playhouse Square, Harlow, on July 29, 2015, but Calvert's initial not guilty plea meant a trial had to be arranged.

The court heard how Calvert approached the victim, who was with her child, and made a sexual remark before placing his hand on her buttocks as she walked away.

He was given a curfew for four months, to remain inside his home from 8pm to 6am.

Order

He was also given a criminal behaviour order to not enter Harlow town centre for more than two hours in a 24-hour period.

He will also pay £200 prosecution costs and a victim surcharge.

Judge David Turner QC told Calvert: "It was incredibly frightening and upsetting for the victim."

"She was with her child in a public place and you made a series of unpleasant remarks and as she walked away you touched her bottom."

"I can see from her statement that she was upset and embarrassed because of your behaviour."

"I am not sure why you behaved in that way."

"This appears to be an act out of character, but an unacceptable one."

"This has been hanging over the head of the complainant because you pleaded not guilty."

"At the 11th hour and 59 seconds you have decided to plead guilty. You will get very little credit for the plea."

"I am relieved the victim did not have to recount her experience."

Prosecutor Jamie Sawyer and defence Neil Fitzgibbon took time to debate a suitable sentence as Calvert has depression, has not worked for more than three decades because of his breathing problems and relies on benefits for his income.

Married

It was said Calvert, who is married and has two grown-up children, did not know the victim.

He took his seat wearing a dark jacket, jeans and a gold earring.

The judge added: "I am going to have to treat this as an isolated piece of misconduct."

Council asks school pupils to float boat name ideas

ESSEX County Council might have entered dangerous waters by opening a boat naming competition to primary school children.

Consultation

Last year the Natural Environment Research Council (NERC) were left red-faced when 'RSS Boaty McBoatface' steamed ahead of its rivals in a public consultation to name a new research vessel.

NERC eventually named the boat after BBC legend David Attenborough.

But Essex Outdoors, a division of the county council, might have opened the floodgates to many more amusing ideas by launching a competition of their own.

Primary schools are being asked to name one of the three new Dufour Drakkar yachts based at their Bradwell centre where they will be used for water-based activities and sailing courses.

The competition, which opened last month, closes on Friday, June 16.

Chance

During this time pupils have the chance to enter the competition and enter their suggestions for a name for one of the boats.

From the entries, three winners will be selected and will win a sailing trip for themselves, five classmates and a teacher.

Councillor Ray Gooding, cabinet member for education said: "I'm delighted to see a fun competition that seeks to involve children and give them the opportunity to be part of something as memorable as naming one of the new boats."

GENERAL ELECTION

ROBERT HALFON: MP who regained Harlow seat but lost frontbench role is

HOW LONG WILL BLUE REIGN LAST?

ROBERT Halfon became Harlow MP for the third time on Thursday night with an increased vote share.

With 24,230 votes, the Conservative polled more than he did when he was first elected in 2010 and again in 2015.

As things stand, barring any second general election this year, Mr Halfon will be the MP for Harlow and surrounding villages until at least 2022.

This would mean 12 years in the job, but how

Stan Newens, Gerry Hayes and Bill Rammell

does this compare with Harlow's previous MPs?

■ Stan Newens – nine years

Harlow's first MP won the seat for Labour in 1974 and held it until 1983.

■ Jerry Hayes – 14 years

A key part of Margaret Thatcher's Government, Jerry Hayes became Harlow's first Conservative MP in 1983 and held the post until the Labour landslide victory in 1997.

■ Bill Rammell – 13 years

Bill Rammell defeated Mr Hayes when Tony Blair came into power in 1997. He held the seat until 2010.

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

ROBERT Halfon has said his Conservative Party is on "death row," and criticised its general election campaign.

Harlow's MP, re-elected on Thursday, was interviewed on BBC Newsnight on Tuesday evening and also wrote a comment piece for The Sun.

Mr Halfon's critical comments follow Prime Minister Theresa May's decision to remove him as minister for apprenticeships and skills. But the MP said the feelings had been with him for longer.

In an interview with Evan Davis, Mr Halfon said: "We have a big problem in terms of our message, our values and expressing them to the public."

"We did not get our message across as to what we stand for. We're the party of the ladder, we give people the chance to climb that ladder."

"I believe the symbol of the party should be the ladder and

Mr Halfon criticised Theresa May's election campaign not the tree, you see."

He added: "We frightened pensioners and we frightened people about school meals."

The MP, wearing a rainbow tie, also reiterated his desire for the Tories to be renamed 'The Workers' Party' and to connect with trade unions.

To this, Mr Davis asked: "Have you thought of joining the Labour Party?"

Mr Halfon continued: "We face potential calamity as a party. People do not understand our values."

"We failed to get a message across that we are also a party for the poor. When the Labour Party knock on the door, everyone knows they are there for the underdog."

In The Sun article, he wrote: "The Conservative Party is on death row. Our election campaign portrayed us as a party devoid of values. 'Strong and stable' is hardly a battle cry. I cannot remember a time in the campaign when the Conservatives attempted to explain what we are really about."

He added: "Virtually nothing was said on the NHS or schools or the caring professions that work within them."

"Is it any wonder the Conservatives did not get a majority?"

'Our Tory party is

'Thanks for this show of faith in me'

CONSERVATIVE Robert Halfon was re-elected Harlow MP with an increased vote share and admitted on election night that he was "really proud" of how he had done.

Despite it being a tough night for his party, the Tory polled 54 per cent of the vote.

Afterwards, Mr Halfon said: "I want to thank the people of Harlow for putting their faith in me. I am really proud the vote has gone up."

ROBERT Halfon has lost his role as apprenticeships and skills minister in Theresa May's cabinet.

The Harlow MP was one of four ministers moved on by the Prime Minister in a reshuffle.

Mr Halfon previously spoke of his passion for the job and championing apprenticeships.

Mr Halfon took 21,263 votes in 2015 while Suzy Stride, the Labour candidate that year, polled 13,273, meaning both main parties increased their vote share this year.

Ukip suffered the biggest decline of the night in Harlow, dropping from 7,208 in 2015 to just under 2,000 this time around. Lib Dem and Green candidates also suffered slight declines.

The turnout of 66.37 per cent was higher than in both 2015 (65.27) and 2010 (65.13).

Ex-minister takes sacking on chin

Monday evening, he tweeted: "It has been an honour to have served as apprenticeships minister."

"I am proud we have a record 900,000 apprentices and to have passed the FE/TE bill."

In the Evening Standard Mr Halfon is quoted as saying: "The Prime Minister has to make these decisions, I wasn't really given a reason."

Mrs May has not yet named a replacement for Mr Halfon, who previously served as minister without portfolio and deputy chairman of the Conservative Party.

Sir Oliver Heald, MP for North East Hertfordshire, was another casualty – losing his position of justice minister.

GENERAL ELECTION

scathing in criticism of Theresa May on death row'

Ukip candidate hints at radical change after support slips away

THE Ukip general election candidate for Harlow said big changes could await his party after a disappointing night.

Mark Gough came third in the constituency but polled 1,787 votes compared with the 7,208 the party won in 2015, with the Eurosceptic movement suffering similar results nationwide.

Ukip leader Paul Nuttall resigned after the election and Mr Gough hinted that radical changes, including a change of name, could be ahead.

He said: "We have made it very clear we (Ukip) are still here. We are clearly the third party in Harlow."

"It is a case of watch this space with our party now. I think we have got an important party conference coming up."

"We are looking at Brexit so we could look at getting the independence part out of our name."

He added: "[It could be] the most disastrous hung parliament there has ever been."

"No matter what way you look at it, nobody is going to be able to govern the country. I do not think a second election can be ruled out."

Conservative Robert Halfon won the seat for the third time. After the results were read out at

Ukip candidate Mark Gough pictured on election night

Harlow Leisurezone, other candidates reflected on the election.

Hannah Clare, the Green candidate, said: "I wanted to use this campaign to talk about some important issues."

"Emily Davison died 104 years ago yesterday. I am proud to be the only woman standing in this campaign, I would like to have seen more women."

"I think that I would like to attribute to the fact that the system is poorly weighted and that we do not have a fair voting system."

Phil Waite, the Labour candidate, will not rule out standing again for the Harlow seat.

He said: "For me it has been a positive campaign. Eight weeks ago there was not going to be an election."

"We have grown our vote share and we have closed the gap to the Conservatives. There was a collapse in the Ukip vote."

Future

"We need to work with people who decided to vote Tory rather than vote Labour, who were Ukip voters, to show them the Labour Party is the party of the future."

Liberal Democrat Geoff Seff said: "Congratulations to Robert, he ran a very good campaign, perhaps a little better than the national Tory campaign."

"I would like to commend the other candidates. They fought a decorous and civilised campaign."

"I wish Harlow well in the future and I hope to be back next time."

Doorstep sellers spark burglary fears by taking snaps of homes

Police alerted over suspicious activity

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

CHURCH Langley and Newhall residents fear suspicious individuals are targeting their homes by taking photographs while trying to sell artwork door to door.

Two women have been filmed attempting to sell paintings on the Harlow estates. Some residents who answered the door found marks had been left outside that they claim could indicate if the tenant is elderly or has a dog.

Confront

The same women were also seen taking photographs. A video shows angry residents confronting two women in the street.

Essex Police received a call at 7.15pm on Thursday, June 1, to reports of two women taking pictures of a property in Denby Grange, Harlow.

The video was taken in Church Langley, Harlow, as a warning

Officers then received a further report at 6.40pm on Tuesday, June 6, of a man acting suspiciously in Coalport Close, Harlow.

A spokesman from Essex Police said: "Officers have been unable to locate the suspects and we are currently treating them as isolated incidents."

ated incidents."

The concern is spreading around both estates, according to Tracy Allen, branch manager of Old Harlow estate agency Belvoir!

She said: "My thoughts are that if they are genuinely trying to sell goods, you would call in the evening when you know people are most likely to be at home."

Witnessed

"Also, if you are just innocently selling your wares door to door - why is there the need to take pictures of people's houses, which we witnessed them doing."

"They are purposely targeting affluent areas where all the houses are privately owned, so there is a good chance that they are owned by people who are out at work all day."

The offending TrustyBus in Hobtoe Road, Harlow

Bus firm faces string of complaints over illegal parking on yellow lines

TRUSTYBUS has been criticised after a single-decker was seen illegally parked on double yellow lines on several days.

Natalie Wilsher, 30, from Harlow, said she photographed the vehicle parked near her road on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday last week before contacting the company.

The buses were seen parked on the double yellows on Hobtoe Road.

Mrs Wilsher said: "I noticed the illegal parking on half a dozen occasions before I emailed TrustyBus.

"I have emailed them about five separate incidents. The first two times they responded saying they would speak to the driver. I haven't heard anything in response to the past email."

Dangerous

"The buses are always parked up on Hobtoe Road around the corner from the Colt Hatch shops. I think that where they are parking is not only illegal but also dangerous and it's much more likely that an accident will occur because of the way they are parking."

She added: "The fact that they continue to do so despite several complaints gives the impression that they don't care."

Galleon Travel, the firm which operates TrustyBus, had not replied to a request for comment at the time of publication.

Restaurant owner is 'excited' to be reopening business after fire

Manager said it felt like 'losing a child' when he saw damage to popular eatery

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

A CHINESE restaurant has reopened in Old Harlow 18 months after it was damaged by fire.

Sam's Crystal Palace Restaurant, in High Street, began trading last Wednesday, June 7, after an emotional journey for its manager of 28 years.

In January 2016 the Star reported that fire crews spent six hours battling the blaze, which was caused by faulty electrical equipment.

Sam Man, 56, restaurant owner and manager, said: "I came to the restaurant and saw fire engines there.

"My daughter called me and I went straight there.

Hoping

"I was hoping they would not be at my restaurant but they were.

"It is hard to say but the feeling was like losing a child and the pain went straight to the heart.

"I could feel tears running down my eyes."

The fire and smoke damage was so severe that the library next door was forced to close temporarily while it took the combined return to Old Harlow and customers can expect a familiar menu and friendly service.

Mr Man added: "It has taken 18 months and it has been too long. "It took three weeks to get the place ready.

"It is smaller but everything is brand new inside and it is cosier. We have spent a lot of money on it."

Mr Man's wife Kitty and children Jennifer, Jenny and Jason all help out at the family-run business that also contains a karaoke room.

The restaurant caters for around 80 to 90 people.

He added: "We have got a Facebook page and 8,000 people have seen (the reopening notice) in just two days.

"We have been in Harlow for 28 years and a lot of people have missed us.

"I'm excited and relieved."

Man and woman told to pay £650k

Pair guilty of drug and money laundering offences

By Richard Duggan
star@hertsexnews.co.uk

A PAIR involved in money laundering and drugs have been ordered to pay more than £650,000.

Robert Preston, 57, and Michelle Clark, 53, who used to live in Ongar, were among a group arrested on the A13 in West Thurrock in February 2014.

The group was found to have 196 kilos of skunk cannabis worth nearly £2 million.

Conspiracy

Preston and Lee Samways, 27, then both of Great Stony Park, and Stephen Demetriou, 25, were charged with conspiracy to import Class B drugs.

Both Demetriou, of Wallace Way, Romford, and Preston were also charged with money laundering.

They admitted the charges and were sentenced at Basildon Crown Court in May 2015.

Preston and Demetriou were jailed for four years and three months. Samways was jailed for 21 months.

Clark was charged with money laundering.

She pleaded guilty at Basildon Crown Court and was sentenced in August 2015 to ten months' imprisonment, suspended for 12 months, ordered to carry out 200 hours of unpaid work and to pay £900 in costs.

Essex Police applied for confiscation orders which saw Preston told to pay £367,608.61. If he fails to pay, Preston will face three years in jail.

Clark was ordered to pay £288,814.09 or face two years' imprisonment.

A petition has been launched to restrict low-flying aircraft

Residents sign petition to alter low flight paths

Campaigner aims to reduce noise levels

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A PETITION has started to restrict planes flying low over Harlow and Roydon on their way to and from Stansted Airport.

More than 100 people have signed Lee Munden's appeal fuelled by his anger at the noise and disturbance of aircraft.

Mr Munden, 58, who lives in Rectory Field, Harlow, said: "Some people say that you just get used to it, but you should not have to get used to it."

"I thought there would be enough interest to have it go to Parliament to change the laws and requirements."

"When I started it (my goal) was to have Stansted Airport modified, to be pragmatic and to make life easier for everyone."

"The airport has no intention of changing anything. The public have rights but they are not able to exercise their rights because of the way the big guys operate."

Mr Munden said in a meeting with MAG, the group which owns Stansted Airport, it was explained why the planes fly at such a height over Harlow and that it is within UK airspace guidelines.

But he is convinced planes could and should be flying higher and recently started the petition, which has now been signed by 108 people.

Reconsider

He hopes this will support his campaign to force Stansted to reconsider a different flight path. "If the planes have a problem that low then they have nowhere else to land other than probably a local school," he added.

In his statement with the petition Mr Munden said noise from aircraft could impact upon Princess Alexandra Hospital.

He also joined campaign group Stop Stansted Expansion in opposing plans which could develop the Essex terminal into the UK's second busiest airport.

A spokesman for MAG said: "We recognise aircraft noise is an important issue which is why we take it seriously."

"We have an excellent track record of reducing the effects of our operations and this can be highlighted by the fact that Stansted's noise footprint has shrunk by 40 per cent over the past 20 years."

"This has been achieved by our airlines replacing their fleets with new, modern, quieter aircraft and by introducing innovative flying techniques designed to reduce the noise impacts from aircraft."

He added: "We are acutely aware of our responsibilities and we will continue to work hard with our airlines and the industry to minimise the effects as far as we possibly can."

Airport's bid to increase passenger allowance by ten million per year

STANSTED is looking to increase the maximum number of passengers it can handle by 10 million per year – making it the second busiest airport in the UK.

The massive increase – which equates to an extra 11,000 flights each year – has been revealed in a request submitted to Uttlesford District Council.

The request for a scoping opinion – the authority's formal view on what issues an Environmental Statement should contain – is being asked for ahead of a planning application to "facilitate making the best use of the existing single runway".

This will include amending the existing cap on numbers.

In a statement to Uttlesford DC Stansted Airport added it wants raise the cap from 35 million passengers per annum to approximately 44.5 million, as well as an associated increase in aircraft movements from the existing permitted total of 274,000 to around 285,000.

It would make Stansted the country's second busiest airport behind Heathrow – leapfrogging Gatwick which in 2016 handled 43.1 million passengers and 275,633 flights.

Although there are no plans for a second runway yet, the planning application will ask for permission for additional airfield infrastructure, comprising two new links to the runway, six additional stands on the mid airfield and three additional stands on the north eastern end of the airport.

Alistair Andrew, planning manager for the airport, said in a statement: "It should be noted that at this time no significant adverse environmental effects are predicted as a consequence of the proposed development."

representative Steve Evans to recognise her long service over the past 17 years.

After handing over the honour at The Clock House, in East Gate, Harlow, Mr Kavanagh said: "I don't make a habit of going to the pub at ten in the morning, but it was the right place to honour the fantastic work Jenny has done.

"Alcohol-related crime has a big impact on our communities and Jenny's work over the past 17 years has made Harlow safer.

"I am delighted for Jenny and this award is testament to her dedication and hard work with local partners."

Razed Roof

INCLUSIVE Harlow theatre group Razed Roof has won The Queen's Award for Voluntary Services.

The award is an endorsement of the work being done by Razed Roof, and most importantly, recognition of all the contributions and commitment given by volunteers, supporters, and trustees.

peaks in each country.

This was another event as part of the Harlow is 70 celebrations. The choir excelled with numbers from West End shows such as Les Miserables, Chitty Chitty Bang Bang, Fiddler On The Roof, to compositions by Irving Berlin and John Rutter.

These were especially accompanied by Jane Kenton on the accordion and David Pearson on bass guitar.

■ DWP

Useful courses would help

THE DWP are always stating that they want people to gain employment, yet when I told them that I want to do the NCTJ course at Harlow College this year, the DWP wrote back to me saying I can't do it.

How come the Jobcentre force people onto courses that they don't need, that they learnt at school in their GCSEs, yet when they want to study something they know they will be good at,

Clare Harrison says that the Jobcentre forces people onto courses they don't need they say no?

I need this course to add yet another string to my bow within the media, but the DWP will not allow me to go to college.

It feels like the system actually want people to stay in one place and do nothing with their lives.

This is why we have so many uninspired people on the dole in this town, who feel hopeless, all their ambitions have been taken away from them by the system. Something has to change.

I thought the Jobcentre was there to help people become better versions of themselves.

The well-known journalism course is only 19 hours a week next year too, and still they won't allow me to study it.

How can working class people better themselves if the DWP won't allow them to?

Answer me that.

■ DOG ATTACKS

Last year 56 cats fell victim

AS a national charity dedicated to the welfare of cats, we were distressed to read your article 'Owners upset as pet cat loses leg after dog attack' (Harlow Star, May 25) which told of the trauma suffered by Mr and Mrs Eggleton's cat Bobby.

Last year 56 cats were reported in the press as having been the victim of a dog attack.

Sadly 84 per cent of these were fatal.

The vast majority of dog owners are responsible owners and keep their dogs under control.

However, where an owner does fail to control their dog and the dog injures or kills a cat or other animal the law needs strengthening.

An attack by a dog on a cat can denote a dangerous dog.

Too frequently cases are reported where a fatal attack on a child was preceded by a prior attack on a cat.

In our 2022 Agenda for Cats, launched ahead of the General Election, we are calling on candidates to support community policing initiatives, such as Local Environmental Awareness of Dogs (LEAD).

We also want strengthened legislation to prevent dog attacks on cats.

It's important that these attacks are taken seriously measures taken to prevent further tragic attacks on people's family pets.

Readers can find out more about our 2022 Agenda for Cats on our website www.cats.org.uk/2022agenda

We would welcome your readers' support for this important campaign.

SOUND OUT

I WANT TO DO EVERYTHING!

DUBLIN at night. Imelda May roams the streets she grew up in, a brief escape from the chaotic conveyor belt of reporters eager to talk about divorce, motherhood, and her latest album.

Walking where her mother and grandmother did before her, she observes the touch of a hand on someone's back, a conversation in a dark alleyway, brief interactions.

A few weeks later she compares it to being in a glass box, detached from reality.

"It's unsettling and beautiful at the same time," the 42-year-old explains from her garden in London. "It just sparks something in your head, a few lines of song or poetry. I walked into the town and it all poured out of me, just a 20-minute walk."

She can't be in that head space all the time, with a four-year-old daughter, but describes it as an escape, "Especially when you're writing about bad times."

Those bad times are prominent in Life. Love. Flesh. Blood, the fifth studio album from the Irish songstress. In 2015, after 12 years of marriage, she divorced her former band member and father to Violet, Darrel Higham.

Writing allowed her to channel the negativity into something positive and produce a piece of work, produced by T-Bone Burnett (Elton John, Elvis Costello), which ditched her signature rockabilly sound for soft rock and acoustic ballads. It also coincided with a new look for the singer, as she swapped her trademark highlight cowlick quiff for a fringe, and the transformation began with scrapping any kind of plan for the record.

"I didn't intend to do anything other than write an honest album," she explains. "I was fed up of planning what I was going to

Two years after splitting from her husband, Irish singer-songwriter, Imelda May tells JOE NERSESSIAN how the pain of divorce and joy of motherhood drove her to create her most honest record yet write. That freedom was lovely and life was changing so I dug deep and now I'm feeling the pros and cons of doing it."

Those negatives are having her soul pulled apart by "cut-throat journalists" (kindly, she says I'm an exception) but the pros include connecting to people on a greater level and being flung into place where she has rediscovered an urgency for learning.

"I feel like I got so stuck for a while and somehow got unstuck and I'm running with it and I can't get enough of it," she says. "I want to hear every album, I want to know every lyric, I want to see every play, I want to read every book. I can't get it in quick enough."

"I want to walk and look at the clouds and take time and work my a off at the same time. I just want to do everything. There's so much wonderful creativity around and I seem to be in a hurry to absorb it all. It's strange when you get periods like that."

I query whether this burning enthusiasm has come from being a mother. The question is greeted with a long pause, a stutter and another shorter pause.

"Do you know what?" She finally muses. "I never got that link before. It never dawned on me that's why I've been like that," she continues, "because I keep getting these questions that I can't answer asking me 'how has motherhood changed you?'"

"And people want this big hippy answer and of course it changed me. It changed my whole perception of the world, it changes what world you want to live in, it changes your time management, it changes your sleep pattern so it changes everything. It really does."

"But I don't know how to answer that for an interview because it's so all-consuming and such a massive question. But you're absolutely right it's exactly where it comes from," she says.

"It's being with her and her open-mindedness and seeing the world with new eyes, it definitely rubs off on you."

Although the album was written prior to the Brexit vote and election of Donald Trump as US President, Imelda, like dozens of artists, has decided to take aim at the controversial Republican.

Drawing on inspiration from the Women's Marches that took place across the world in response to his inauguration, she came up with a similar march for a music video to Should've Been You. Shot in one continuous take, the video stars her fans (invited to appear on Facebook) walking through Brixton market holding dozens of placards emblazoned with slogans such as Love Not Fear.

"I'm not trying to be a politician, I'm not trying to change the world but I wanted to say what I wanted to say," Imelda explains.

"And it's not an angry aggressive anti-men thing, which is often the way things are misconstrued. But we're contributing to society, we want to be treated equally regardless of gender."

She says one positive from Trump, Brexit and the creeping tide of the far right, is the outlet from pain which forced Imelda to create her most searing, honest record yet.

"It makes people more creative and certainly for me growing up in Dublin, music was my saviour, I had an outlet and people need an outlet."

■ Life. Love. Flesh. Blood is out now on Decca Records.

ANI DI FRANCO - BINARY

IT'S easy to forget how prodigious Ani DiFranco's output has been, but it is hard to forget how purposeful and political that music has been.

While her 20th studio album, Binary, is softer and slower, she continues her humanist social commentary, but with more maturity than ever before.

Binary was written before the 2016 election but many tracks foreshadow the state of modern America. She sings about teaching non-violence with Pacifist's Lament and issues a rallying cry for reproductive rights in Play God.

And she continues to surprise and delight with songs about the confusion and hedonism of desire.

The atmospheric Zizzing, featuring Bon Iver's Justin Vernon, is a particular highlight. This merging of politics and humanity is as thought-provoking as it is moving.

LONDON GRAMMAR - TRUTH IS A BEAUTIFUL THING

IN 2013 London Grammar's first album, If You Wait, was a critical and commercial success, sold more than two million, and won an Ivor Novello. So expectations were high for their sophomore album.

It opens with Rooting For You, which is solely Hannah Reid's haunting and distinctive voice for the first half before a sparse musical accompaniment is introduced. This sets the tone for the record with its gentle beats, swooning synths and otherworldliness. It may take some time to absorb this collection, it's not immediate to the ears, but what unfolds is beautiful and cinematic.

RISE Against have provided some of the more recognisable punk rock tracks in recent years, and the albums that contained them (including 2004's Siren Song Of The Counter Culture) were more overtly political than recent offerings - including Wolves. This must be a conscious move, but it's a shame they have toned down their political content - especially in the era of a Donald Trump presidency and terror threats.

Politics aside, this album is musically tight. They blast through the songs in no time at all, with tracks such as The Violence sure to get circle pits moving at their gigs as singer Tim McIlrath delivers his usual distinctive vocals.

BOOKSHELF

For the good of the boys, Jack was not in their lives for a time

TV star and life coach Jeff Brazier, father of the late Jade Goody's boys, tells HANNAH STEPHENSON about meeting up with her widower, Jack Tweed, and dealing with grief

TV PRESENTER Jeff Brazier has morphed from Essex cheeky chappy and reality TV star to qualified grief counsellor. The 38-year-old presenter and former professional footballer, a regular on ITV's This Morning and single father to the late Jade Goody's sons, Bobby, 14, and Freddie, 12, is now a life coach.

He's also an ambassador for the children's bereavement charity, Grief Encounter, a role for which his own experiences make him eminently qualified.

Jeff was widely admired following the death of former girlfriend and Big Brother star Jade, when he looked after his boys and protected them from the media glare.

Jade died, aged 27, from cervical cancer in 2009. Although they were no longer together – she had married Jack Tweed a month before she died – there was never any doubt Jeff would have sole custody of the children.

He initially kept his distance from Jack, who faced a number of assault charges and convictions in the years following Jade's death, but after a chance meeting, Jeff asked if he would like to see the boys. This led to Freddie and Bobby being reunited with their estranged stepfather two months ago.

"I know Jack had a difficult time in the relationship (he was with Jade for three years) and a difficult time after Jade died, and as a result, it was a difficult decision for me, but the way that he was living at the time wasn't conducive to the stability of two bereaved children," Jeff says of his decision to sever ties with the widower.

"While it was a hard decision to make at the time, it was never permanent. I'm very pleased to say that a month or two ago we were invited to dinner at his mum and dad's house and the three of us went and had a really lovely time.

Jeff Brazier's new book applies the lessons that he's learned about overcoming grief

"They gave the boys each a gift of a big framed picture of their mum that Jack had received at the wedding. He'd kept hold of them for the boys for eight years, which I thought was wonderful.

"There's a reason we stay in touch with people sometimes. It has to be for the good of the kids. It was for the good of the kids that he wasn't in their lives for a time, but maybe now he can start to integrate himself back into their lives, because he has priceless memories of their mum."

He hopes the boys will see Jack more regularly, but is not going to put pressure on them, he says.

"It has to be right for him as well. I could imagine that on that day, he had a lot of emotions going through his mind, both before, during and after seeing them, and for some people it might prove too much. I don't know when they'll see him again, but I hope they do."

He writes about Jack in a chapter of his first book, The Grief Survival Guide, an informative, part-autobiographical read, that explores the symptoms of grief in its many forms, using case studies and his own experiences to navigate loss and all that comes with it.

His own life has had rocky patches. His mother, Jeanette, gave birth to him at 16 but his father decamped. When her relationship with his stepfather – who he thought was his real father – broke down, they ended up for a time in a women's refuge in Yarmouth.

When he finally found out who his real father was, it was too late. Stephen Faldo was skipper of the Marchioness, a party boat that sank in the Thames after colliding with the Bowbelle, a dredger, in 1989. Stephen was among the 51 dead.

Jeff has clearly learned a lot bringing up his two sons and dealing with their grief, but has somehow managed to move on. His girlfriend, travel PR Kate Dwyer, lives with them at his home in Essex.

Jade and Jeff in 2003

"My coping mechanism at first was to shut up shop and concentrate solely on the boys. When I realised I was doing OK, I started to welcome the notion of having a relationship," he says.

"Kate and I have been together three years and we have a great relationship. It's hard for her being a step-parent. It would have been easier for girlfriends in the past because my children were adorable. "Teenage children are not always cute and adorable and it requires more patience and understanding on the part of your partner coming into that family. We work very hard on our communication and that's why the relationship's been doing very well."

He has always had a six-month rule before introducing a new partner to the boys. But they got on straight away.

"It's a balancing act. The boys don't compare her with Jade. I wasn't with their mum. They have scant memories other than the pictures I show them."

So, is he planning on getting married?

"There's no point in being in a fantastic relationship for it to not head anywhere, so that has to be the aim. At this stage in my life I've got to be building something. The relationship is a good one, so I think it's very possible."

"We've got a wonderful balance where the boys get that female influence in their lives."

He also hints that he'd like more children. "I love being a dad and I'd be intrigued bringing up children with the person you bring them into the world with because I haven't had the benefit of doing that. I can imagine it being a hell of a lot easier. It would be a relief to share the responsibility."

LATEST TITLES

THE MINISTRY OF UTMOST HAPPINESS by Arundhati Roy, Hamish Hamilton, £18.99 (ebook £9.99)

THE skeleton of this novel is loss. Every moment, every scene, flutters around the sensation, and drives the next, so you are drawn inexorably onwards as the characters – a bunch of broken-hearted renegades and misfits – go about reclaiming land, feelings, rights, power and family infinitesimal step by infinitesimal step; and it's astonishing.

It is 20 years since Arundhati Roy's ground-breaking, Man Booker Prize-winning The God of Small Things, and in that time Roy has been writing contentious essays on India's troubled, and troubling, political system.

The Ministry of Utmost Happiness mines her research, and braids together strands of the brutal, toxic Kashmir conflict, with the difficulties faced by a community of hijra (transgender people, now recognised as the 'third gender' in Indian law) and the fate of an abandoned baby. Roy demands your mind and time, and the rewards are huge.

STANDARD DEVIATION by Katherine Heiny, Fourth Estate, £12.99 (ebook £7.99)

HEINY'S debut novel delves into the lives of a New York couple as they negotiate the stresses of modern family life. Graham has been married to glamorous, spontaneous second wife Audra for 12 years.

Her effusive personality, and need to make useful acquaintances, leads to the couple reconnecting with Graham's ex-wife, hosting a handful of lodgers and attending a trail of play dates for socially awkward son Matthew. As daily life and its challenges pass by, Graham ponders his life choices. Although the novel takes a pedestrian pace it is anything but boring. Heiny's observational humour almost turns the pages itself and will make you look at loved ones and strangers in a new light.

METHOD

1. Put the shredded chicken into a bowl and add all the remaining ingredients apart from the rice paper wrappers. Give the filling a good mix and add salt and pepper, if needed.

wrapper at a time, dip it into the warm water and leave it just long enough to soften - this should be quick, about five to six seconds.

4. Transfer the wrapper to your chopping board, unfolding where necessary. Place about two heaped tablespoons of filling across the middle of the circle, leaving a gap at either side.

5. Fold the sides over the filling and then pick up the edge closest to you and fold over the filling. Keep rolling until you fold over the far side where it should stick. Place your completed summer roll onto the greased tray and repeat the process with the remaining paper wrappers and filling.

6. Serve up the summer rolls just as they are, or with a side of sweet chilli sauce.

Wicks is no average Joe

Joe Wicks is back with his latest cookbook, Cooking For Family And Friends. ELLA WALKER chats to the Lean In 15 entrepreneur and Insta-foodie about his latest venture

JOE WICKS should run for public office. Not only has the 31-year-old fitness coach and Instagram sensation got a passion for changing lives (and physiques) and a sizeable following (1.8 million on Instagram; 274,000 on Twitter), he also knows when to admit he hasn't got all the answers.

Take his ideas on Britain's health service, an area he'd "love to really make some impact" even though, as yet, he says, "I don't know how I can do it with the NHS - that's a big beast".

"I just feel it's sad that people are getting sicker and sicker, and more and more unhealthy, and (the country) spends billions and billions at the other end of it; on heart disease, diabetes, obesity - it's food, diet and exercise related," he explains.

"If only we could just get some knowledge and education at the beginning to prevent all that stuff - it's the answer to it all, you know, billions of pounds would be freed up to do other stuff."

"It's all economics - I don't understand the economics of it all, but I know I'll do my bit to inspire people as much as I can."

The Epsom-born personal trainer is, of course, best known as 'The Body Coach' to his fitness disciples. Three years ago, Joe launched his subscription-based 90 Day Shift, Shape and Sustain Plan, and went, stratospherically, from sharing amateur recipe videos and workouts online, to helping thousands of people trim down and get fit for a living.

Full to the brim with charm, you can see his appeal - a combination of endless enthusiasm and a monumental work ethic. That and the fact he's not in the least bit starchy, even sitting on a London rooftop terrace awaiting a 'Joe-mito' (a riff on his watermelon and mint 'posh slush puppy'), at the launch party of his fourth cookbook, Cooking For Family And Friends.

It marks the halfway point in an eight-book deal for Joe, and is a more inclusive follow-up to his wildly successful trio of Lean In 15 cookbooks (all three still grace the best-seller charts, and sales have topped 2.4 million).

This time around, he's catering for busy dinner tables, rather than solo gym bunnies.

"You know how sometimes you feel like, if you're on a diet, it's just you on your own? I wanted you to think, well actually, you can have barbecues and parties and make them healthy," he explains.

"You can still batch cook and make your kids' lunch. In fact, the whole family won't even know it, but they're eating healthier, so are going to get leaner, without anyone saying, 'You've got to eat this, you've got to eat that'."

The former boot camp trainer

has also included a few treats - namely sticky toffee pudding and chocolate fondant.

"Just because chocolate isn't 'clean,' he says, fingers miming air quotes, "doesn't mean you can't enjoy it and have it now and again."

Joe admits that no one person got him into cooking, but as for becoming an entrepreneur, his ultimate hero is Jamie Oliver.

Without taking a breath, he reels off his every encounter with the Naked Chef, the most recent being when the duo grabbed dinner together at Jamie's restaurant Fifteen.

"We sat there for four hours on our own talking, and he's just so generous with advice. He downloaded all this wisdom and knowledge and experience.

"He's on a mission. I told him, 'Mate, you work hard,' says Joe, visibly galvanised.

Aside from transforming the NHS and writing another four books, what else is left on his own mission?

"The message is, no matter how old you are, you can exercise and feel good; you can take control of your body, you don't have to starve yourself.

"I'm for everyone; fitness and food for everyone."

■ Cooking For Family And Friends by Joe Wicks, published by Bluebird, is priced £20.

THE other day I thought of packing a picnic for me and the dog and then the rain lashed down. We stayed in and ate ham and crisp butties. I'm nothing if not classy. Then, by coincidence, Sherry Wines UK (sherry.wine) sent me ideas for a sherry picnic, to mark their Sherry Festival (which runs until Sunday).

Sherry is not a one-trick pony. Don't think of it as a glass of something creamy and sweet to give Auntie Bessie on Christmas Day (sorry if I've patronised those of you who know better).

Sherry is a perfect drink for outdoor summer eating. Here's a selection for your picnic table:

■ Inocente Single Vineyard Fino Sherry (£14.50, rudewines.co.uk, 15% abv): According to the Sherry Wines website, a classic fino "has the extraordinary ability to stimulate tastebuds".

RAISE A GLASS

WITH JANE CLARE

Inocente is a special fino in that, unlike many other finos, its grapes are from a single vineyard and are barrel fermented. It is dry, it is tangy, it has a tingle of salty olives, it is savoury but zesty and is spot-on with seafood.

■ Sacristia Manzanilla En Rama 2015 Release Primera Saca 2014 (£13.56, laywheeler.com, 15% abv): Manzanilla is produced exclusively in the bodegas of Sanlúcar de Barrameda near the sea. The term "en rama" means "raw" which indicates that filtering technology has been kept to a minimum and the sherry has a more natural taste. Mmm I loved this wine, it has aromas of the sea, salty, tense and windy-wild yet laced with citrus; the flavour was light, spicy, dry, yeasty with notes of green olives.

■ Cayetano del Pino Palo Cortado Solera (£14.95, winesociety.com, or £11.49, waitrosecellar.com, 20% abv): Palo cortado sherry is one of the rarest forms of sherries, created because nature has decided the sherry isn't going to develop as a fino and takes it down another route. This is a pale tawny colour, has aromas of smoke, bitter orange and dried fruits and when sipped with a handful of smooth white almonds, its complex flavour bursts with nutty promise.

Check if there are festival events near you at sherry.wine/sherry-festival. Follow @SherryWinesUK or check #SherryfestivalUK on Twitter.

■ Also in my glass... It's Father's Day this weekend and I'll say one word. Beer. Right now there's a beer festival at the majority of Aldi stores with everything from caramel flavoured treats through to fruity brews at £1.29 per 500ml bottle (the festival continues while stocks last).

Elsewhere, importer Pierhead

Ltd has brought together a selection of worldwide award-winning beers. I enjoyed Phuket Lager (5% abv) a Thai beer brewed with German hops and Thai Jasmine rice. It was crisp, refreshing, fragrant and exactly what I needed as the sun said peekaboo.

Then there's Moosehead Lager (5% abv). Well I do like my lager. Moosehead is Canada's oldest brewery and I'm told this delivers notes of creamy, sweet potatoes (I didn't get that) however it was smooth and gently hoppy. Both beers are available online (by the case) at Beers of Europe and TheDrinkShop.com

INGREDIENTS
500g lamb mince
250g beef mince
50g breadcrumbs
1 egg
12 pitted black olives,
roughly chopped
20g pine nuts, roughly chopped
Small bunch of parsley, finely chopped, plus extra for garnish
2 jarred red peppers
(about 100g), drained and roughly chopped
into small pieces
1tbsp olive oil
1 red onion, diced
1 x 400g tin of chopped
tomatoes
Salt and pepper
2 x 110g balls of mozzarella
To serve:
Mint leaves, roughly chopped
Salad or steamed green beans

3. Get your hands stuck in and knead all of the ingredients together until the mixture is well-combined. With damp hands, shape the mixture into 12 large balls and set aside.
4. Heat the olive oil in a large ovenproof pan over a medium to high heat. When the oil is hot, chuck in the red onion and fry, stirring regularly for two minutes. Tip in the chopped tomatoes along with a quarter tin of water. Season with salt and pepper and bring to the boil.

METHOD
1. Preheat the oven to 180°C (fan 160°C/gas mark 4).
2. Place the lamb and beef mince into a bowl and add the breadcrumbs. Crack in the egg and chuck in the olives, pine nuts, chopped parsley and red peppers.

HAVING A BALL

BALLS
(SERVES 4)

5. Place the meatballs in the sauce and simmer for 10 minutes, then carefully flip them over with a large spoon. Tear up the mozzarella balls and lay a little piece on top of each meatball. Any remaining cheese can be scattered in the sauce.
6. Slide your pan into the oven and bake for 20 minutes, until the meatballs are fully cooked through and the cheese has melted and turned golden brown on top.
7. Scatter over the mint leaves and remaining chopped parsley and serve with a helping of salad or steamed green beans.

INGREDIENTS
300g plain flour
35g vanilla protein powder
2tsp baking powder
1tbsp caster sugar
350ml milk
2 eggs
1-2tbsp coconut oil, for cooking
400g blueberries, plus extra for scattering
To serve:
Zero-fat Greek yoghurt
Maple syrup

PANCAKE DAY

AMERICAN-STYLE
BLUEBERRY PANCAKES
(MAKES 8)

METHOD

1. Tip the flour into a bowl and add the protein powder, baking powder and sugar.
2. Measure out the milk, then crack the eggs straight into the measuring jug. Give the two ingredients a good whisk until well-combined.
3. Gradually pour the wet mixture into the dry mixture, stirring or whisking as you go to avoid lumps.
4. When all the liquid has been incorporated, give the mixture a final whisk until smooth.

5. Melt a little coconut oil in a good non-stick frying pan over a medium to high heat. When it is hot, pour in one ladleful of the batter, which will spread out across the base of the pan to about 15cm wide and 1-1.5cm thick.
6. Fry the pancake on the first side for three minutes, reducing the temperature a little if it starts to burn.
7. While the pancake is cooking, scatter about an eighth of the blueberries in a single layer over the uncooked surface of the pancake. They will be held in place by the raw batter.

8. Flip the pancake and cook for a further two to three minutes, again upping or reducing the heat as necessary – these pancakes are like most other pancakes in that the first one is often not the best.
9. Remove the pancake to a plate and keep it warm while you repeat the process with the remaining batter and blueberries.
10. Serve up stacks of your pancakes with a few extra blueberries, Greek yoghurt and a drizzle of maple syrup.

FILM REVIEWS

With Damon Smith

Lindsay Duncan as Evelyn, Chris Evans as Frank and Mckenna Grace as Mary in Gifted

Holding back the tears

A precocious six-year-old girl with a beautiful mind is the glittering prize of an acrimonious custody battle in Marc Webb's deeply moving drama.

Penned in broad strokes by screenwriter Tom Flynn, Gifted overcomes a formulaic structure to deliver hefty emotional wallops, and provides buff leading man Chris Evans with a meaty dramatic role to test his acting mettle rather than his bulging biceps.

Webb's film is laden with delightful surprises, including a stellar performance from 10-year-old Mckenna Grace in the pivotal role of a quick-witted mathematical prodigy, who is sassy beyond her years.

She deftly eschews winsomeness to capture the frustrations of her wunderkind, who is painfully aware that she towers above her peers and some of the teachers, who are supposedly shepherding her to brighter academic horizons.

On-screen rapport between Evans and Grace has the ease and familiarity of kin, and when the floodgates open in the film's second half, both actors let the tears flow naturally and break our hearts in the process.

Admittedly, Oscar winner

GIFTED (12A)

Octavia Spencer is poorly served in a perfunctory supporting role and a subplot involving a one-eyed pet cat veers dangerously close to mawkishness.

Thankfully, director Webb nimbly avoids each potentially fatal pitfall without sacrificing compassion for his flawed characters.

Florida boat repairman Frank Adler (Evans) home schools his cherubic niece

Mary (Grace), who inherited her passion for algebra from her late mother.

Frank feeds the child's insatiable hunger for knowledge but also jealously guards Mary's playtime.

He wants her to have a normal upbringing, full of laughter.

Against the advice of worrywart neighbour Roberta (Spencer), Frank enrolls Mary in first grade of the local school, where the little girl dazzles her form teacher Bonnie (Jenny Slate) by performing complex multiplications in her head.

Octavia Spencer plays Frank's neighbour Roberta

The school's principal (Elizabeth Marvel) takes an active interest and is dumbfounded when Frank refuses a full scholarship for Mary to a nearby school for gifted children.

"Never get on the bad side of small-minded people with a little authority," warns Roberta.

Soon after, Mary's maternal grandmother Evelyn (Lindsay Duncan) materialises in Florida to stake a claim to the child in the court of Judge Edward Nichols (John M Jackson).

While Frank and Evelyn trade verbal blows through their lawyers, Mary makes clear her unerring devotion to Frank: "He wanted me before he knew I was smart".

Gifted is a heartfelt ode to sacrifice that succeeds despite its occasional reliance on clichés.

The dynamic double-act of Evans and Grace are ably supported by Duncan as a steely matriarch, who believes she knows best but has much to learn, like her spunky granddaughter.

A romantic dalliance involving Frank and Mary's teacher is sensibly kept on the backburner as the heartbreak of the court case swells and we clamour in the dark for tissues.

ROCK DOG (PG) ★★★★★

A Tibetan Mastiff bows down at the altar of the rock gods and discovers the inner riff of a true hero in Ash Brannon's computer-animated fable.

Adapted from the Chinese graphic novel Tibetan Rock Dog by Zheng Jun, this simplistic coming-of-age story strums to a familiar beat and strikes each emotional chord with a heavy paw.

Brannon's script is inoffensive to the point of blandness, repeating its central chorus of affirmation and self-belief to the target audience of young children.

Visuals are colourful and character design opts for cuteness over realism but there is a palpable lack of detail in every frame, which sets apart animations from the Pixar and DreamWorks stables.

Measured against yesteryear's anthropomorphic buddy Disney comedy Zootropolis, Rock Dog limps into a very poor second.

Brannon's film certainly isn't a dog's dinner.

There are flashes of broad humour that elicit warm smiles and the central character possesses a roughly hewn charm as he masters his father's signature move, the Iron Paw, through his trusty guitar.

However, plotting is linear, the resolution is telegraphed far in advance and there is very little in the script to engage parents.

Bodi (voiced by Luke Wilson) is a teenage rebel, who has been raised by his stern father Khampa (JK Simmons) to guard their village, Snow Mountain, from a marauding pack of wolves led by snarling alpha, Linnux (Lewis Black).

Most of the residents are sheep so Khampa creates the illusion of a home guard of Tibetan Mastiffs by dressing up the flock as dogs and posting doppelgangers in clear view of Linnux's spies.

"If the enemy thinks there's an army here, they won't invade," reasons Khampa.

Unfortunately, Bodi's passion is music not protecting the village and when he neglects his duties to listen to rock god Angus Scattergood (Eddie Izzard) on the radio, Khampa's patience wears out.

He buys his son a bus ticket to the city and instructs Bodi to chase his dream.

"If you fail, you never speak of music again," demands Khampa.

Bidding farewell to the villagers including soothsayer Fleetwood Yak (Sam Elliott), Bodi heads to Rock And Roll Park to busk and forms a ramshackle band with a fox called Darma (Mae Whitman) and a goat called Germur (Jorge Garcia).

Meanwhile, Linnux's henchwolf Riff (Kenan Thompson) arrives in the city with instructions to kidnap Bodi.

Rock Dog won't be topping the box office charts but it's mildly diverting entertainment for our nation of ardent animal lovers.

Izzard's droll vocal performance enlivens his scenes and while Brannon's script hits a few bum notes, the underlying message is on song.

Every dog has its day, even misfit mutts who don't bark the same tune as the rest of the pack.

I'm compulsively honest... lying in any way is just not comfortable

DAVID BADDIEL TALKS TO MARION McMULLEN ABOUT DYSFUNCTIONAL RELATIVES, FOOTBALL AND GAY CATS AS HE ANNOUNCES A NATIONWIDE TOUR OF HIS HIT WEST END SHOW

What has reaction been like to your show, My Family: Not The Sitcom?

REALLY good. There have been amazing comments about the show, really lovely. Sometimes you think 'I can't do this again plus two shows on a Wednesday and Saturday.'

It's extremely tiring psychologically and I put a lot of myself out there, but people have been really lovely and it's provoked more reaction than anything else I have ever done.

How would you describe the show?

IT'S not just about my dad and dementia. There's also a lot about my mum and her extreme and out-there sex life and my own history.

It has been called a love letter to my parents. I didn't know it myself, but it came from a place of love... more than I realised.

What did your own family think about the show?

BOTH of my brothers were unsure at first, but I had to say 'Trust me on this.' I reveal a lot about our family, but I've always had to tell the truth. It's not a moral thing, it's kind of a compulsive thing about myself.

I'm compulsively honest. I find lying in any way just not comfortable. Not everyone has had my family experience, my family are so out there, but everyone has weird stuff in their family.

Have there been any surprise audience revelations along the way?

PEOPLE really want to tell me their family secrets, secrets that they have never revealed before.

One guy told me how they used to go on holiday when they were kids with his mum and dad and a man they called uncle. But it turned out mum and dad were swingers and they were part of a ménage à trois.

Is it hard to unwind after the show?

I FINISH at 11.30pm in London and my wife (comedy performer Morwenna Banks) is usually in bed. She's filming a sitcom at the moment and I hardly see her.

We have four cats and I spend a lot of time with them every night. (Laughs) They think I'll feed them so they are very nice to me in the hope that they will get an extra midnight feast.

I normally hang out with them for 20 minutes before going to bed. We have one cat... I wouldn't call him gay, but I think he's gender fluid.

Are you still finding time to write your children's books?

YES, AniMalcolm is just out in paperback and I'm working on the next one which is out in October.

It is about a boy who wishes it was his birthday every day and then his wish comes true.

I have a five-book deal and the first book, The Parent Agency, is being turned into a film.

The nicest comments I get on social media are left by parents of children reading my books and photos saying 'Here's Billy reading.'

Are you disciplined when it comes to writing?

(LAUGHS) I'm very undisciplined. I take my computer everywhere I go and write when I can.

I was even writing at half time at Chelsea games with people giving me weird looks. I can spend ages and ages looking at the internet.

Writing is hard work and the internet is a massive problem for writers. There are lots of funny people out there and interesting conversations. It's a lot of mental distraction.

I have this software that blocks you from picking up anything on the internet for about an hour.

It doesn't really work for me. I just look at my phone. It's a terrible addiction.

What's next for you?

I'M GOING to have a short break and then I'm taking the show to

HEALTH & LIFESTYLE

YOGA body. Innocuous-sounding, but peel it back and the preconceptions are there. "Until the turn of the 21st century, the yoga community in the West has been characterised by people who have the money and the time to devote themselves to it, and that has tended to fall into the category of wealthy, predominantly white, slender people, and even more specifically, women," explains Jessamyn Stanley, yoga teacher and author of new book Every Body Yoga.

"The reality is that, that has nothing to do with yoga. The truth of yoga has absolutely nothing to do with body size or skin colour or physical ability (or) gender expression. It's literally about connecting to your breath and looking within yourself."

Jessamyn, from North Carolina, describes herself as 'fat'. She's not from a moneyed background, nor did she spend her teens vaulting in the gym. She's honest and, if you want an answer to whether or not you'll pass wind during yoga (you will), she's your go-to woman. So when she says 'every body yoga' she means it.

Like many of us, she has felt the laser-like gaze on her in the studio, but hopes in writing the book, more people will feel encouraged to practice.

Here, she lays out her advice on three common concerns...

PROBLEM ONE: WHAT IF EVERYBODY LOOKS AT ME IN MY YOGA CLASS?

"ONE of the most common questions I get is, 'I'm worried that everyone's going to stare at me.' And I'm like, 'They are going to stare at you.'"

"That's the first thing you need to get over before you even go to the class because you can't spend the whole time thinking, 'Everybody's looking at me.' Everybody is looking at you."

■ What can I do? "If you're that concerned about it, don't go to a live class. Take an online class. Sometimes it really is that intimidating to be in a space with other people. If you take an online class, you don't need to have a teacher in the room with you, staring and telling you what to do."

"If you have a space that feels good for you, that's really all you need."

PROBLEM TWO: I CAN'T STOP THINKING ABOUT HOW I LOOK DURING YOGA PRACTICE

"WE SPEND so much of our lives asking each other, 'How do I look? Does this look OK?' It's, 'How do I appear to others, not how do I feel?'"

"If every time you put on clothes you said, 'How do I feel?' you'd walk out of the house wearing wild things."

"But the point is that no one is having the experience you're having,

Boost your yoga body confidence

BREATHING, STRETCHING AND SELF-AWARENESS ARE THE BASICS OF YOGA, AND YET SOMEWHERE ALONG THE LINE WE'VE LOST SIGHT OF THEM, JESSAMYN STANLEY TELLS KEELEY BOLGER

so if it feels good to you, that's all that matters. And nowhere is that more true than on a yoga mat."

■ What should I do? "It's so different to say, 'How do I feel?' Because 'how do I feel' might mean I need to pay more attention to this area, or I need to internalise this."

"That experience is so much more worthwhile and so much more telling. You can mine that experience for truth way more than you can the question of how you look."

PROBLEM THREE: WHAT IF I CAN'T DO ANY OF THE YOGA POSES?

"I USED to feel self-conscious that people were looking at me because I'm larger-bodied and the teacher would always be like, 'Have you done yoga before?' and give me a lot of attention I didn't want."

"(Even now) I still have to talk myself down. I will be in a class and think 'Man, I feel very self-conscious here.'"

■ What can I do? "Don't look at other people; close your eyes."

"Find ways to slowly tune into yourself because no matter who else is in the room, it's your practice. Even if you don't get out of shavasana (relaxation pose)."

"Even if you don't move. Even if you stay in table top position and you come out of downward facing dog after a breath every single time, it's fine, because that's your practice."

"You don't have to give an explanation to anybody else. You don't have to feel guilty about it."

"That's something I wish I had understood in the beginning."

■ Every Body Yoga by Jessamyn Stanley is published in paperback by Workman, priced £12.99.

Allergies on the rise thanks, in part, to red velvet cakes

THEY are a favourite of TV cooks Mary Berry and Nigella Lawson, but the popularity of red velvet cupcakes is fuelling a rise in food allergies, according to a top dietician.

With the food industry using ground-up South American cochineal bugs for colour, there has been an increase in patients diagnosed with allergies linked to its use.

Dr Isabel Skypala, a consultant allergy dietician at the Royal Brompton & Harefield NHS Foundation Trust, said our diets had changed massively since the 1960s.

"Our exposure to lots of different foods has also changed," she said.

"I get faced in my clinic with people who have gone out to eat and have eaten pizza or been to that new burger place or had red velvet cupcakes."

"That is due to the rise of the red velvet cupcake allergy which is all due to cochineal."

"In the 1980s with awareness of E numbers a lot of companies started using natural food colourings which can have proteins in them which can cause allergy. So now I have the red velvet cupcake allergy."

Dr Skypala said there were a lot of potential causes of allergy in Indian takeaways and also Michelin-starred restaurants.

Designer Penny Seume shows off a mood board. Right: One of her lamp designs

Drawing the shade

How fabric designer Penny Seume transforms her inspiration from sketches to a stylish reality

One of the great things about being an interior designer is spending time sifting through loads of wonderful fabrics and working out how to use them, feeling their textures, admiring colour combinations and patterns.

Their variety is infinite – from voiles as translucent as dragonfly wings to dense and heavy velvets as strong as iron; plains to intricate patterns.

And I always think of the fabric designers behind these fabrics. We see the finished product, not the journey, which can be long and tortuous.

So what does it take to be a fabric designer? I decided to ask Penny Seume, a designer currently based in Bristol.

She has painted, drawn and made things for most of her life and went to Bath Spa University as a mature student, taking an MA in Textile Design. I first met Penny at a trade interiors show at the NEC in Birmingham where she had won a stand as a finalist in the New Design Britain awards, her New York inspired textiles and home accessories having caught the judging panel's eye.

Her fabrics caught my eye too, and we've managed to do some work together over the years. Her designs are contemporary with the occasional retro edge, feature both urban and natural landscapes and sport great colour combinations

In the five years or so Penny has been in business for herself she has seen her fabrics and accessories feature in Anthropologie, a lifestyle store that is a byword for those who love eclectic, handmade, colourful and unusual things and also in galleries such as the Cotehele Gallery in Cornwall. She also exports to the USA and Australia.

Penny's designs draw on urban landscapes for inspiration

The Vagabond Shoes sofa design

– watercolour, acrylic and oil, before drawing out and creating a cut and dyed paper collage of the whole landscape," says Penny.

This part of the process can take a month or more as she will often re-work designs, fine tuning or adding colour.

Part of this stage is making sure the repeats work. As she notes, when she was developing the Manhattan skyline fabric, it was very hard trying to work out how to repeat the buildings.

As Penny's fabrics are digitally printed onto cotton or velvet, she also has to be aware of the limitations of that process.

Translation of colour from Penny's initial design to the printed fabric can be a fraught journey, where the very precise combinations she originally specified can be lost in translation via ink.

Although there are downsides to digital printing, one of the advantages is the ability to change scale. This came to glorious fruition in the sofa that Penny, myself and Ann Dyke, upholsterer, collaboratively designed and made for the Society of Designer Craftsmen, where Penny won a Distinction for her stand.

This sofa featured a large scale version of Penny's New York Skyline – which provided the inspiration for its name of Vagabond Shoes [all of us being old enough to be able to sing along with Frank Sinatra], and great fun was had by all to make sure the fabric and sofa design worked together. We took to gin, I believe....

I still love this piece, and have a soft spot for the seat, which features a repeat based on just one element of the design and looks almost reptilian – in a good way, of course!

■ Visit readinteriors.co.uk

I asked Penny about the start of the design process – just where does she get her inspiration?

"Well, mainly from architecture and urban landscapes for texture, colour and shapes – a whole collection was inspired by the twinkling lights glimpsed through trees in the gathering dusk over the Bath skyline", she explains.

And when you look at Penny's work all this makes sense. I enjoy knowing the stories behind designs [and telling them to my clients] – it gives another dimension to enjoying the fabric. The next stage in the process is to develop the inspiration into something tangible.

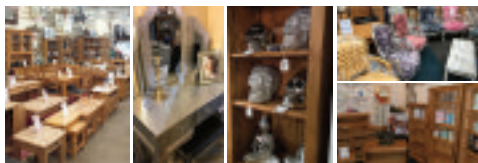

"I see the initial inspiration, photograph and sketch it. Next I will often paint using a variety of media

YOUR HOME

Lofty ambitions

If you need more space at home, converting the loft into an extra room, or rooms, can make a lot of sense, both now and when you come to sell

Converting your loft should make your home more valuable if you want to sell it in the future

1 If your home's loft is more useful to you as living space than storage, converting it is the obvious thing to do.

A loft conversion should make your home more valuable and sellable, and if you can fit a bathroom or shower room up there, as well as a bedroom and built-in storage, you have the perfect master or guest suite.

2 Loft conversions cost from around £20,000, but are often a lot more, depending on the size, spec and type of conversion.

The cheapest and easiest loft conversions are ones with only skylights, as the line of the roof is unchanged.

However, this isn't ideal if the loft has limited space and head height.

3 Building out the roof to create more useable space inside will give you a much more satisfactory conversion.

As long as there are no planning restrictions, building a full-width dormer window across the roof at the back and changing the side of the roof so it's 'straight' (viewed from the front or back) instead of sloping (this isn't possible with mid-terraced houses) will maximise the space internally.

4 For a loft to be suitable for conversion, the main space should be at least 2.3m high – generally, the steeper the pitch of the roof, the better it will be for conversion.

Standing up in the loft and walking around (if safe to do so) will give you an idea of how much useable space there is. If there isn't enough head height, even by building out the roof, you may be able to lower the ceilings in the rooms below, but this will be expensive and disruptive and isn't practical if they're already quite low.

Another option may be to rebuild the roof to make it higher, which is also a big, expensive job.

5 You'll need space for a staircase up to the loft on the floor below and if this means losing a bedroom, you may not be much better off by converting the loft.

Spiral staircases can be a good space-saving solution, as can narrow (and straight) 'space-saver' staircases, although they aren't necessarily practical for everyday use and are unlikely to comply with building regulations.

Loft conversions can be expensive, so make sure it will give you the benefits you want

PROPERTY TALK

With Nigel Lewis

The Laguna Beach property which was once renovated by Diane Keaton

DIANE'S A DOER-UPPER

Diane Keaton's career has been as varied on screen as it has been off. As well as starring in many Woody Allen films and a clutch of Hollywood blockbusters, the highly private actress has also had relationships with several co-stars including Allen but also Al Pacino and Warren Beatty.

These days the 71-year-old is also a blogger for the Huffington Post, wine maker, and property developer.

The millions she's earned from films such as First Wives Club, Annie Hall and Father of the Bride has been spent in part doing up and then selling on luxury homes in Los Angeles.

But it's not just for profit - Diane says she also does it to help preserve the city's architecture and she works on projects with a preservation organisation.

She is not the only Hollywood star to refurbish homes as a side-line; others include Ellen DeGeneres, Jennifer Aniston and Meg Ryan. One of Diane's early restoration projects is for sale.

It's a Laguna Beach house with views over the Pacific which was built in 1928 for a fruit magnate.

The property is in what Americans call the Mediterranean Revival style featuring stucco, decorative Spanish tiles, wood beams, carved doors, ironwork and terraces surrounded by lush plantings.

Diane bought the beach house in 2004 for $7.5m and spent two years doing it up, selling it in 2006 for $12.75m. It's now on the market for $15.98m.

ON THE HUNT FOR A NEW PAD

James Hunt pictured in 1974

Seventies racing driver James Hunt makes today's clutch of Formula One competitors look dull. Hunt liked partying, drinking, drugs and chasing women and revelled in being a playboy.

He also behaved eccentrically at times, often dining alone in restaurants with his dog and turning up barefoot to official functions.

But his driving record was impressive, nevertheless, peaking in 1976 when he won the Formula One Championship while driving for McLaren.

After a spell in Spain as a tax exile, James returned to the UK to work alongside Murray Walker as a BBC racing commentator, and attempted a comeback as a racing driver.

During this period between 1980 and 1982 he lived on Normand Mews in Kensington, central London, in luxurious splendour in between his first and second marriages.

He later moved to Wimbledon and married his second wife with whom he had two children, one of which went on to be a racing driver.

James died in his sleep in 1993 at the age of 45.

His former Kensington home recently came on to the market and, vendor Dale Allen told magazine The Resident, he bought the house so he could park his collection of Ferraris in its garage.

The house is within a gated mews and has been given a luxurious update. Spread over two floors, it has a Miele & Gaggenau kitchen, an open-plan living space, four bedrooms and a roof terrace.

It's for sale with Carter Jonas (020 7731 3333) for £2.8m.

FANCY A FLAT WITH A BANKSY?

Graffiti has come a long way since the 1990s when it was the bane of local councils who spent millions trying to wash it off walls.

Now it's art, a fashion started by Bristol-based spray-canner Banksy during the Noughties and who has since risen to global fame for his work.

One of his better known is The Artist, the nearest thing anonymous Banksy will ever get to a self-portrait.

It is framed on a wall on Acklam Road near

Notting Hill in London. It's a 7x14ft piece said to be worth £2.3m and is preserved behind bullet-proof glass.

But the artwork is about to be moved.

Enstar Capital is spending £6.5m converting the three-storey building on which the Banksy artwork is sprayed into restaurants and flats. It says the Banksy - by which it means the wall - is to be raised from street level to the first-floor of the development and then illuminated by spotlights.

Properties within Sartoria House - which used to be home to fashion designer Oswald Boateng - are not for sale but will be rented out at £1,000 a week.

They will be available from early 2019.

THIS IS SURE TO MAKE A SPLASH

I'm just popping out to swim across to the neighbours."

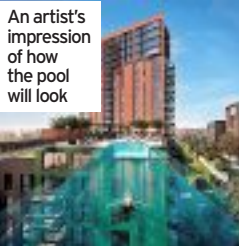

It's not a phrase you are likely to hear unless you live in Venice or on a tropical island. But it may become more common.

A development being built in London by construction firm EcoWorld Ballymore has plans to add a sky pool to the 10th floor, linking its two towers.

It says it is a world-first in swimming pool design because it will span two buildings and be made entirely of glass and acrylic. It will be 25m long, 5m wide.

Swimmers will have to be brave - and untouched by vertigo - as the water will appear to ripple unsupported

An artist's impression of how the pool will look between the towers, hundreds of feet up.

The pool's designed by US aquarium company Reynolds which specialises in the huge 'shark tunnels' in many sea life centres.

Both ends will be overlooked by a 'sky deck' which will include a spa, summer bar and Orangery. As well as the sky pool and deck, residents at Embassy Gardens, in Vauxhall on London's South Bank, also get access to a private members' club including a movie screening room, gym, yoga studio, therapy room, library, lounge area and business suite. Prices start at £650,000.

The development will include 2,000 homes; phase one is complete and occupied, while phase two is under way.

HOME FULL OF UPTOWN FUNK

Bruno Mars is one of the world's biggest stars behind hits like Marry You, Locked Out of Heaven and this year's smash hit, That's What I Like.

In 2012 he released an album called Unorthodox Jukebox that reached No.1 in the US and which - perhaps prematurely - is being heralded as a classic.

Bruno has sung during two Super Bowl half-time shows, but a part of the Bruno Mars story emerged recently that has much less glamorous surroundings; a narrow suburban street in Maida Vale, North London.

Pindock Mews

Pindock Mews is where publisher New Songs Administration was based until very recently. It is Mark Ronson's outfit, responsible for Bruno's biggest hit to date, Uptown Funk. The song spent 14 consecutive weeks at No.1 in the US charts.

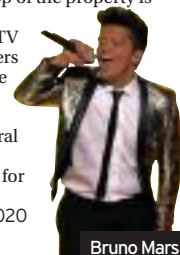

But the property is soon to become a home, rather than HQ to a musical publishing empire.

Permission has been granted to change its use to residential and it is set to become a three-bedroom home with a large basement. The ground floor would be its kitchen/diner and lounge, with room for three bedrooms upstairs. At the top of the property is an existing patio.

Fans of Sixties TV series The Avengers may recognise the street, which featured as a backdrop in several episodes.

The property is for sale at £1.65m.

YOUR GARDEN

With Diarmuid Gavin

Give some love to your fruit crop now because there's nothing nicer than plucking a strawberry as you garden...

The world can feel like a turbulent, unpredictable place at times, and that's when our gardens can become a place of retreat. We often live through our minds and our memories, and central to the psyches of many of us is the garden.

We think back on long summers, often with good weather, spent outside.

We mark the season by national celebrations – it may be the Chelsea Flower Show or Wimbledon.

Beautiful blossoms, not all native to our shores, including roses, dahlias, delphiniums and lavender, remain in our mind's eye as symbols of British gardens where everything is always all right.

Central to this notion of 'keep calm and garden on' is a humble little plant that creeps along the ground before bursting into life with pretty, smiling flowers then the most luscious summer fruit of them all – the strawberry.

There's nothing more delicious than plucking one of those juicy fruits straight from the garden.

They're versatile enough to be grown in borders, containers and even hanging baskets – the latter being a good option to keep them clear of snails.

I grow them in a raised bed and this week spent a couple of hours giving them some TLC.

Weeding is important to allow the plants to gain the maximum moisture and nutrients from the soil. Weeds can also host pests and disease.

As a lot of fruits were forming, it was time to put some strawberry mats or straw down to keep the fruit clean of the soil and prevent rot.

I didn't have any straw handy so I recycled bubblewrap which I think will do a similar job.

You could also use sheets

Strawberries are a sure sign that high summer is almost here

Protect strawberry plants with straw

Taste of summer

Strawberries are ideal for brightening up a pot of black polythene which will warm up the soil before we enter high summer. Polythene will suppress further weed growth and retain moisture in the soil.

Next, I sprinkled a high potash seaweed feed around the base of the plants – it's best to avoid water on the foliage or fruits at this stage.

The final task was to put some fine mesh over the fruits – each year the birds have got far more from these strawberry plants than me!

Horticultural fleece would also be suitable. I'll continue with regular watering and another feed in a fortnight.

If you haven't got a crop growing now, you could buy cold-store runners which are ready to be planted and should bear fruit within 60 days. Or get planning for an autumn planting – buy runners at the end of the summer.

Plant in a sunny, well-nourished soil around 18 inches apart. A sunny sheltered position is best.

As with other food plants, practise crop rotation and avoid planting where strawberries, potatoes, tomatoes and chrysanthemums have been growing.

Strawberries can be prone to root diseases, such as verticillium wilt which can build up in the soil.

In spring, give your plants a general fertiliser and then in early summer a high potash feed while they are forming berries.

After harvest, cut away any dead leaves and clear straw or matting away.

You will get around three to five years from a strawberry plant, but after that you will need to replace it.

Who wouldn't love to pluck a juicy strawberry straight from the garden?

You can also propagate them quite easily from the mother plant which sends out runners – peg these down and they will form new baby plants.

To avoid a glut of too much fruit for just a couple of weeks, try planting early, mid-season and late-season varieties.

'Mae' is one of the earliest croppers,

'Elsanta' which you see in supermarkets is a mid-season, and 'Florence' is a late cropper.

Or plant perpetual varieties which produce smaller berries over a long season, for example Mara de Bois which has a lovely wild flavour.

Just don't forget to stock up on cream...

Rid yourself of decaying spring bulbs

■ Remove decaying foliage of spring bulbs, such as bluebells.

■ Take softwood cuttings. The tender new growth of many plants will root easily (eg fuchsia, hydrangea, lavender). Cut beneath a leaf node where there is a concentration of growth hormones, dip in rooting powder and plant in a pot.

JOBS FOR THE WEEK

■ Water peas and beans – they are starting to flower so will be particularly thirsty as they form their pods.

■ Turn over your compost heap to air it, and add some moisture if it's too dry.

■ Lilies need staking now.

■ Oriental poppies look amazing – however briefly – but after their spectacular flowering, cut them back and you might just get another flush of flowers.

■ Harvest salads and radishes. Then sow some more!

Spring bulbs like bluebells need their decaying foliage removing

Weeding is important to allow strawberry plants to gain the maximum moisture and nutrients from the soil - weeds also host pests and disease

Basket case: You'll make life more difficult for slugs by planting strawberries up high - try a hanging basket or this method using plant pots

ASK DIARMUID

Last year I grew a peony in a pot, which turned out OK with three flower heads.

I looked after it over the winter and again it has turned out well.

It is nearly twice as big with lovely green foliage, but I've only got one flower head this time.

Do you think it needs a much larger pot or should I

Peony flowers

transfer it to the garden?

Mrs Pat Revell

Yes, I think your peony will flourish better in the ground. Do it in the autumn and make sure you don't plant it too deeply - that is the most common reason for lack of flowering. The tuberous roots should lie just an inch or so below the surface.

Choose a sunny position for maximum flowering.

Peonies do take a few years to mature - so you'll need to be a little bit patient. Good luck.

PLANT OF THE WEEK

ACHILLEA 'MOONSHINE'

Achillea, or yarrow as it is commonly known, is in full swing this week. It's named after the mythological character Achilles, whose soldiers used yarrow to treat their wounds. I love the magical transformation of the grey flower buds into sulphur yellow flowers. They shine like beacons even when the sun isn't out.

I have used them recently in a herbaceous border as pools of colour dotted around - the eye hops from one to another.

The grey foliage lets you know this is a plant that enjoys a sunny dry position.

'Lilac Beauty' is a very different variety with, as you might guess, lilac flower heads.

All Achillea are very popular with bees and butterflies.

AUDI'S SPRUCED UP SUV

By David Ward

There's no disputing the fact that when it comes to making superb sports performance Sports Utility Vehicles then German car makers dominate with all new models simply oozing quality all round, inside and out, along with having the all latest and highest on-board technology and engineering available.

Audi are the latest to spice this bag of goodies up from this month with the arrival of their new SQ5 SUV which for starters has a newly developed V6 3.0 TFSI 349bhp twin-scroll turbocharged petrol engine under the bonnet along with quattro all-wheel-drive.

In reality this car is a spruced-up performance version of their standard Q5 which will naturally appeal to those drivers demanding more in road-going performance along with all the associated engineering and technical extras that Audi's Q range always conjures up.

With an on-the-road asking price of £51,200 it follows the route of the rest of the Q range in offering a host of new design and technology features on board and this time with a petrol engine and not the popular three-litre TDI turbo diesel as in its predecessor, although Audi UK confirms an oil burner option will arrive later.

Weighing some 35kg less than last time around (thanks to a lighter aluminium and steel composite body shell) the SQ5 is all about performance and a buyer's question of does it really stand up to not only its predecessor or others in the Q5 range?

The straightforward answer is yes not only because the V6 engine delivers 349bhp in such a quite and unassuming way with its power peak but also offering 500Nm of torque that stays on tap from 1,370rpm through to 4,500rpm.

This relates to an acceleration of 0 to 62mph in 5.4 seconds (incidentally top speed is limited to 155mph) but equally important for Q car drivers is its mid range acceleration for overtaking which again is impressive and it does so in such a subtle manner without any real fuss or commotion.

Yes, there's a nice growl from the exhaust when accelerating hard but overall this three-litre engine is so quiet and refined and whilst those wanting a more sporty performance then push the Sport mode driving button and obviously it accelerates quicker, stiffening the car up noticeable for better cornering with less body roll.

Push the comfort auto mode button and the response is equally impressive offering a more relaxed, long distance kind of motoring and again proving itself no slouch when it comes to performance driving either.

This SQ5 is as one would expect from Audi today a well balanced car (it sits 30mm lower than the standard version) with nicely weighted steering and although it has adaptive suspension as standard in my book it's well worth paying the extra £1,000 for air suspension because it does provide a much better ride, whether driving sportily or cruising along at motorway speeds on long journeys – it does make a difference on those 20-inch alloy wheels.

The other big plus factor on this SQ5 is the well-proven VAG made eight-speed tiptronic transmission where the lower gears have ideal short ratios leaving the upper gears longer to try and save on fuel.

The automatic gear movement up and down the box is quick, refined and so quiet leaving it in fully automatic mode but for those drivers who like to do their own driving as we say the paddle shifts behind the steering wheel are both ideally positioned and offer greater response in changing gear to give a much more rewarding performance.

Interior wise this SQ5 is like its sister stablemates has plenty of quality with supple Nappa leather seats plus strong and solid feeling plastics and switches which has the obligatory chrome touches here and there and neat red stitching gives the inside a smarter finish and standard steel pedals finish everything else off appropriate for the car.

Standard equipment is as one would expect exceptionally good with Audi's MMI Nav plus infotainment system included which again is so simple yet efficient when using it thanks to a single, rotary dial controller plus some shortcut buttons positioned between the two front seats and all models have head-up display as an option for those driver who prefer to use such system.

Other standard features are Apple CarPlay, DAB radio, electric seats and front and rear parking sensors, all-weather LED headlights, cruise control, stop-start and overall this SQ5 beats its two rivals everywhere in terms of the cabin interior and standard features.

As with any car in this class today there's a host of options available and special packs so owners can personalise their model more but overall the technology improvements and more subtle changes made on this latest model make it far better than its predecessor.

Some drivers may be initially disappointed there's no diesel version available at launch but one is coming although in the meantime this excellent three-litre petrol engine should more than satisfy motorists looking for a new model in this sporting niche sector.

At £51,200, it's a tad more expensive to buy in the showroom that those two main rivals – the Porsche and the Mercedes – but it would be money well spent in my view.

Owen is the golden boy at London Area Open

HARLOW Judo Club took three players to compete in London Area Open in the Docklands.

This is a very high ranking event, with players coming from all over the country and abroad to compete.

The standard of judo was therefore going to be high but the Harlow trio who competed in the Minors group (ages eight to 11) held their own.

Owen Lambert, aged 11, won all his fights via Ippon (maximum score) to dominate his weight group to take gold, beating the British Schools Champion in the final.

George Franks (ten), having tried hard, was unable to progress past the compound knockout stage, and was knocked out of the competition.

Team-mate Sam Cobbin-Brown (ten) battled hard and after losing his first fight, also dropped down to the compound knockouts.

He failed to win his next fight and was eliminated.

Coach Mick Ellis said "I am very pleased with the team's performance - they all fought very well and listened to my instructions despite all the noise."

Alana Mansfield in action

Alana takes regional title

HARLOW table tennis player Alana Mansfield has won gold at the Inter-Regional Championships.

The 12-year-old Burnt Mill Academy student was part of the East region squad, which competed against nine other teams from around the country at one of Table Tennis England's flagship events for up-and-coming players.

She was joined in the squad by Samadhi Udamulla of Welwyn Garden City and, after winning their group, they faced South West in the final of the U13 Girls' event.

It was a one-sided final as Mansfield beat Holly Smithson 3-0 (11-6, 11-6, 12-10). Udamulla beat Angharad Beman 3-1 (11-3, 11-5, 5-11, 11-9) and the girls then combined to win the doubles 3-0 (11-5, 11-7, 11-8) to complete a 3-0 overall victory.

Mansfield said: "I'm really happy I think we did really well together. I don't think we expected to do well, but we hoped we would."

"We had good teamwork, and talking to each other was very important, and we had good coaching from Mark Dare."

Historic day for school

IT PROVED a historic occasion for Saint Nicholas School, Harlow as it hosted its first ever Independent Schools Association (ISA) national sports event.

A total of 12 ISA schools travelled from as far afield as Somerset to compete in the inaugural U11 national south football qualifier.

Teams were divided into two pools from which the winners would then go through to the national finals at England's St George's Park.

On a blisteringly hot day, pupils remained competitive throughout.

The top two teams, Alton and The Gower, battled it out for honours, with the latter prevailing to take the title.

Saint Nicholas' girls were competitive throughout, with narrow defeats, and their biggest loss coming at the hands of Alton.

The results showed there is plenty of promise, with Tara Taylor awarded player of the tournament by Spurs Ladies player and coach Shakira Waitha.

Bucks clip Hawks' wings in close final

Harlow put up a great fight in Essex Plate thriller

THEY put up a great fight, but Harlow Hawks were just edged out 77-72 by Bower Park Bucks in the Essex Basketball Plate final at the Leisurezone.

Having finished bottom of the league, Hawks overcame all the odds to reach the final - having previously fought back from a 23-point first quarter deficit in their last four match up at Brentwood Mavericks.

Hawks won the tip off against Bucks and scored straight away with a quick lay-up from Rimas Norkeliunas.

The teams traded points for the remainder of the opening quarter, which ended 12-12.

The second quarter saw the Hawks getting the rest of the team involved as coach Shab Niaz made regular rotations on court.

Points from the big man Tom White, and Hawks' veterans Russ Allen and Saul Friedner matched the Bucks' scoring in the opening three minutes.

However, a lapse in concentration at the defensive end saw Hawks give up six consecutive points.

Norkeliunas sank a pair of free throws and a super three pointer from Niaz tied the scores at 24-24.

Keeping the Hawks on the back foot, Bucks penetrated the defence finding easy points under the basket of the home side.

Superb

Great ball movement led to a superb catch-and-shoot three pointer from Lee Morris, followed immediately by two fast break points, giving Hawks the lead late in the first half.

A last second free throw from the visitors proved the difference as Bucks were ahead 32-31 at half-time.

The start of the third quarter mimicked the previous two as both teams exchanged buckets.

Bucks found themselves at the free throw line four times in the quarter, but fortunately for

Hawks they only converted three from eight.

Niaz found his range from three point land, sinking two big shots to keep Hawks in the game.

Together with Allen's six points and other scores from Morris, Richard Whytock and a single free throw from Norkeliunas, this left Hawks training by three at the close of the third, 51-48.

An increase in defensive pressure from Bucks paid off in the final ten minutes as Hawks turned the ball over a number of times without so much as an attempt on target.

The Bucks poured in eight unanswered points to increase their advantage, but baskets from Stuart Burgess and player-coach Niaz stopped the rot.

But the Bucks' guards found their range from deep, each hitting open three pointers to race into a double digit lead.

After missing a pair of free throws, Whytock began a run of his own with two strong drives to the basket, both successful, followed by a fourth outside shot from Niaz to reduce the deficit to three points.

Plenty of free throws followed in the final minute, with poor shooting all round meaning Hawks just couldn't close the gap.

Fighting to the last second, the Hawks just lost out in an epic final.

Super Sidnie strikes gold at Essex Schools Champs

FOURTEEN-year-old Burnt Mill pupil Sidnie Ward is running into form after winning his second county title at Chelmsford on Saturday.

Ward added the Essex Schools junior boys 800m crown to the Essex U15 title he won last month.

After winning his heat in 2min 10sec, he took control of the final, pulling away on the second lap to cross the finish line first in 2:04 in very windy conditions.

As a result of these performances, Ward will now represent Essex at the English Schools Championships at the Alexander Stadium, Birmingham on July 7 and 8.

"I am confident Sidnie can make the final at Birmingham," said his coach, John Stow.

"He has worked so hard for this and totally deserves his selection."

■ AT the Endure 24, a 24 hour race over a five-mile trail route at Reading, a mixed relay team from Harlow Running Club consisting of Richard Smith, Debbie Barry, Sean Flynn, Holly Nairn and Nicola Smith managed an exhausting 28 laps for a total of 140 miles.

At the Stansted 10k, Jon

Steadman finished in 38th place out of 290 finishers in 48:17. Justin Patten was 68th in 51:36 and Pasquale Pellecchia 102nd in 55:28.

Andy Kinney finished in 441st place out of 464 finishers at the Dorking 10 mile race, clocking 1:42:57.
